

Shirsak Ghosh

(State Aided College Teacher at Serampore Girls' College (affiliated to Calcutta University), West Bengal)

A Changed Mindset

You are the one, my friend.
You have set the Thames on fire
To bring the best version of yourself.
I know at times, you fail.
Believe me, it's hard and it hurts a lot!
Some people fly away from you,
Neglect your work potential.
They don't value cause you lost? Isn't it?
I know what it feels
To be ignored at the threshold of the crowd,
Pointing fingers simply at you
Cause you couldn't win the war.
Mark those people in your heart's name,
Learn from those hard lessons they teach.
It's tough to rise up again
At this special juncture when you need
The closest of people to lift your spirits high.
Tell me are you born to satisfy others?
Have you come here in this world
To listen to everyone's voices?
If so then when shall you listen to your voice?
You are special, do you know it?
Don't stop you on the way
To discover hidden potentials within you.
The universe has a special gift for you
A changed mindset
The power to hold on, my friend

Inspite of everything the world throws at you.

The power to endure hardships inspite of everything.

The hunger and the ability

To face defeat after defeat, my friend without giving up.

Your changed mindset is your gift of life.

Protect it from all sorts of distractions.

Change

The world does not need your hatred,
My dear friend, it does not
Need your gossip and perfidious nature
About your day-to-day life.
It doesn't need your jibe
About those innocuous souls you portray.
Your negative vibe is irredeemable
You couldn't understand the mental torture you undergo
To those who can
Create a better version of life.

The world needs love and care, my friend.
It sprouts its bud
With the flower of hope.
It's intrepid nature comes from your trust.
You cannot understand the depth
Of smart work that some people create,
They bring a new era of intense plenitude
To create a better world.
So, change your vision, thus,
Your perspectives of life will change.